Dear Jim:

You may remember meeting an [redacted], at my house last spring. I just had a note from him, saying that he was retired because of age (he is 60 but much younger than his years), and would like still to be useful if he had the opportunity.

He probably has a wider knowledge of the natives, resources and [redacted] and the associated areas than anyone in the world. He can communicate his interest and knowledge with ease and charm. He is transparently sincere and un-self-seeking. For over 25 years he has been in charge of native peoples for this area and has spent practically all his time in the islands. He took a good degree from Cambridge. He did some informal teaching of Naval officers at either the University of California or Leland-Stanford when he was here.

It occurred to me that he might conceivably be useful. His address is:

All good wishes for the New Year.

Sincerely yours,
